STOP PRESS

Relocation Update

Another Stop Press notice. Sessions will continue at the Besgrove Street workshop this coming week and until further notice.

After last week's committee meeting it came to light just how much work is involved in painting the floor. Once all the trades have finished, the floor has to be washed, sanded, washed again and then have 2 coats of a special paint applied. The paint needs 7 days to dry. Consequently the handover date is still unknown and remains in the "best guess" category. Hopefully it is not too much longer.

Monday is a public holiday so there will not be any sessions that evening but at this stage, there will be our normal session arrangements from Tuesday 11 June onwards.

The General Meeting scheduled for 12 June, will remain cancelled due to the amount of "behind the scenes" work being done. Your session leaders will be updated and should be able to answer any of your questions.

On a positive side, the security system has been commissioned as has the solar system. The workshop is now running on solar power.

On a more humorous side this picture was taken as a memento of the last attendees at the Besgrove Street workshop. Perhaps it will be worth some money as it is now of attendees at the pseudo last session.

With a "glass half full mindset" you still have a chance to attend the last session and be recorded as being there when the club was last open for business in Besgrove Street. Would anybody care to hazard a guess as to exactly which session that will be?

With confidence the Woodpecker can say you will receive regular updates advising status of the new workshop.

Note the club sign has been mounted

A fleeting moment of fame !
